The 12 Signs of Western Astrology

The pages with images for each of the 12 Astrological signs of the Western Zodiac include the dates, the element of the sign, and its quality.

The dates help you identify your sign depending upon your date of birth.

There are four elements in Western Astrology: Fire, Air, Earth and Water.

Fire signs are associated with action, passion and imagination. Aries, Leo and Sagittarius are fire signs.

Air signs are associated with thinking, intelligence and concepts. Gemini, Libra and Aquarius are air signs.

Earth signs are associated with practicality, methodology and sensations. Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn are earth signs.

Water signs are associated with emotions, feelings and opinions. Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces are water signs.

There are three qualities that the Astrological Signs can have: Cardinal, Fixed and Mutable.

Cardinal signs mark the beginning of the season and have to do with starting, creating and birthing energies. Aries, Cancer, Libra and Capricorn are cardinal signs.

Fixed signs are in the middle of seasons and have to do with stability, continuation and growth. Taurus, Leo, Scorpio and Aquarius are fixed signs.

Mutable signs mark the end of seasons and have to do with adaptability and bringing things to an end. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius and Pisces are mutable signs.

The 12 Animals of Eastern Astrology

According to legend, long ago, when there was no way to keep track of time yet, the Jade Emperor (or Emperor of Heaven) called a contest for all the animals in the kingdom. The first 12 animals to arrive at the palace would have a place in the Chinese Horoscope. In order to get to the Emperor they had to cross a fast river. The Ox was the first to get to the shore on the other side and out of kindness agreed to carry the rat on its back as it swam across the river. Right before the Ox presented itself to the Emperor, the Rat jumped to the ground and arrived first. The tiger swam across and was third. The rabbit crossed the river by jumping from rock to rock and hence became the fourth animal. The dragon flew but was fifth because he stopped along the way to make rain and help all beings on Earth. The snake was sixth, but only because it had coiled itself around the horse's hoof, and sprang up before it as the horse was arriving at the palace, so the horse became the seventh animal. The goat, the monkey and the rooster became the eighth, ninth and tenth animals in the Chinese Horoscope, arriving all together after sharing a raft. The dog, even though it was the best swimmer of them all, was eleventh — it was muddy and it decided to take an extra-long bath when it got to the river. Just as the emperor was about to call it a day, the pig arrived. He had gotten hungry during the race, stopped to eat and then took a nap. It woke up with barely enough time to make it to the palace. Since then, each of these twelve animals now are part of the Chinese Horoscope, and every year is named after an animal. This cycle repeats every twelve years.

Just as each year is identified with one of the 12 animals of the Chinese Horoscope, it is also assigned an element. Chinese Astrology has five elements: Water, Wood, Fire, Earth and Metal. Each element repeats for two years, first in a strong yang version and then in a weaker yin version. This way the particular combination of an animal with an element only happens every 60 years.

Each animal also has an “internal” element, one that it carries with it no matter what the element of that particular year may be. The way the animal is expressed in that year largely depends on the way these two elements interact with each other.

Yin and Yang literally mean “the dark side of the hill” and “the sunny side of the hill.” The dark side of the hill is cold and humid, and traditionally related to feminine energies. The sunny side of the hill is light, dry and warm, and traditionally related to masculine energies.

Each of the pages devoted to the animal years of the Chinese Horoscope includes information about the internal element of the sign, and whether it is yin or yang.

Each page also has, on the right hand side, images of a wave, a rectangle, a triangle, a square and a circle to represent, respectively, the water, wood, fire, earth and metal elements. These figures contain the same healing image that Bill created for the animal sign.

If you do not know your animal sign, check the tables on pages 72 and 73. The Chinese year doesn't always start on the same date, so if you were born in January or February, double check to make sure you select the right animal.
